“As testing continues to increase in New Jersey, so does the number of contact tracers. Contact tracers are a vital part in stopping the spread of COVID-19, because their investigations can help pinpoint a source and anyone that has possibly been exposed,” said Kevin Thomas, Cape May County Health Officer.

A contact tracer begins an investigation within 24 hours of a positive case being identified. The contact tracer will call you, identify themselves, and ask you a series of questions. The most important part of the investigation is compiling the contact list. The contact list can link that individual to another positive COVID-19 case and identify anyone that has been exposed. A contract tracer will not ask for the following information:

- Social security numbers
- Bank or credit card information
- Health insurance information
- Immigration status, or criminal history

After the investigation is performed the contact tracer will follow-up with anyone that had a possible exposure to the COVID-19 case to determine if an individual has symptoms and needs to self-isolate. If you have any questions about contact tracing, feel free to call (609) 465-1200.
